Chapter 1

Welcome to the Ring, Baby

You thought you were tough, you thought you were bad, but then you stepped into the ring and were taught the meaning of pain–real pain. Steve Austin left you "stone cold" and The Undertaker quickly sent you to the not-so-sweet hereafter–and that was just during the warm-ups! While you are indeed being taught a lesson, it's not exactly the kind of wrestling instruction you want or need.

That's where this handy-dandy pocket guide comes in to play. Between the covers lies everything you need to know to reach the top and become king of the ring.

In this chapter, we'll discuss the basic controls of the game, whether your platform of choice is the Sony PlayStation or the Nintendo 64.

In Chapter 2, we'll cover the game basics. In particular, we'll analyze all the important and damaging moves that can be found in the War Zone that is the WWF. We'll also touch on the different modes of play, such as "Challenge" and "Tag Team," giving you the stuff you need to succeed.

Chapter 3 introduces you to the enemy (or your wrestler of choice, depending on how you look at things). We'll show you all the moves for all the wrestlers, discuss his strengths and weaknesses, and what to expect from each wrestler–whether he's in your corner or the enemy. We'll also list each wrestler's Secret Moves, the ones that you won't learn from any Training Mode–the stuff that you'll use to wipe up the competition.

To make things easier for the reader, we made sure you could easily find each wrestler's SECRET MOVES. All the SECRET MOVES appear in red, so you can quickly pick them out from the regular moves.

Well, what are you waiting for? Jump in the ring and prepare to battle the fight of your life!

Chapter 2

Master the Basics: The Basics of Wrestling

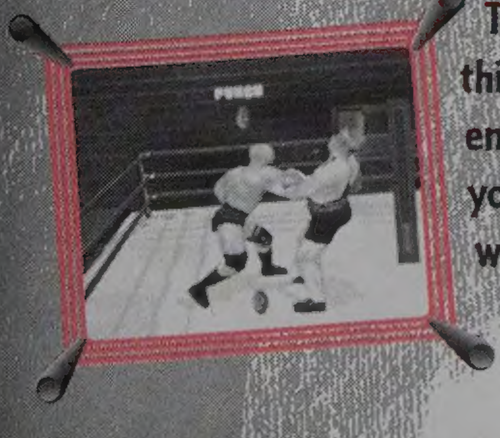
You wouldn't even consider climbing behind the wheel of a car if you didn't know the difference between a steering wheel and a brake pedal, now would ya? So why would you climb into the ring without knowing a suplex from a DDT? In this chapter, we're going to get you up to speed on all you need to know about the important moves found in WWF War Zone.

Keep one thing in mind: Although some buttons do the same thing for all the wrestlers (like Punch and Kick), different wrestlers have different key combinations for the same move. So while pressing Up, Down, Tieup will make Steve Austin perform an Overhead Belly Belly Suplex, that same key combination will make Thrasher execute the Samoan Drop. The key is to pick which wrestler is your favorite and learn the key combos for his moves.

On the next several pages, we'll take a look at many of the moves featured in WWF War Zone. We'll cover the ones you'll want to be most familiar with, either because of their easy execution, or because of their high damage points (or maybe even both). Master these moves (along with the secret ones mentioned in Chapter 3) and you'll become a wrestling machine!

The Moves, the Mayhem

The Punch



The most basic of moves, the punch is just the thing to momentarily daze your opponent long enough to set him up for the killer move you've been hiding up your sleeve (if you were wearing any). It doesn't pack much damage, but better him than you!

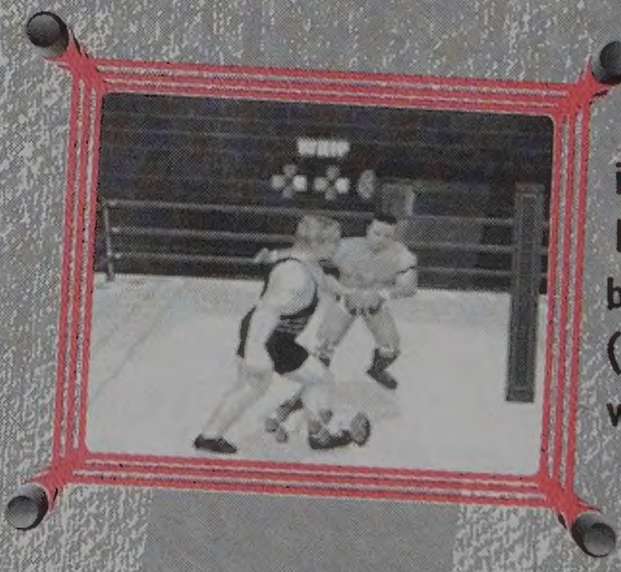
The Quick Kick

A Quick Kick to the gut works wonders for your gameplan. Although like its low damage brother, the Punch, it doesn't cause too much hurtin', however, you can quickly lower your opponent's health with a few quick boots to the belly, setting yourself up to perform a more serious maneuver.

The Tieup

Just in case you've been spending your days in a cave, almost all of your really deadly moves will end up being performed by using the Tieup. If you find that your opponent has wisened up to your incessant punching and kicking, it's a good idea to quickly move into a Tieup to quickly dish out some serious pain.

The Whip



This basic move will quickly have your character grabbing his opponent and whipping him into one of two places. He'll get launched either A). into the turnbuckle, which feels none too good (plus you can race over and whomp on him some more) or B). into the ropes, where he'll come helplessly flying back to either a clothesline with the Punch or a Quick Kick.

The Arm Drag

This quick and dirty move allows for the easy flipping of an opponent. Although it doesn't exactly rack up the damage points, you'll no doubt impress your friends with it (especially if they're the victims).

The Arm Wrench

Having your elbow pulled back behind your ears isn't anyone's idea of a good time. Although it doesn't inflict a whole lot of damage, this great follow-up to the Arm Drag is fun to watch as your opponent squirms in pain.

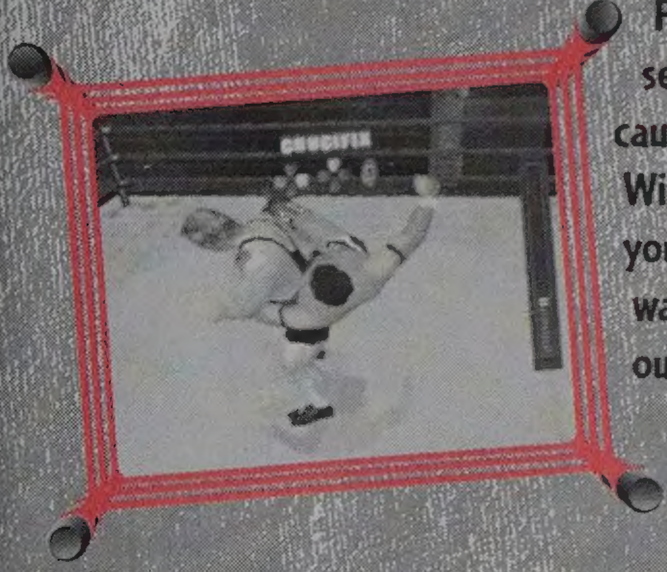
The Bearhug

This move is exactly what the name implies. Even though it may not look terribly impressive, it dishes out plenty of hurt, as well as sending a few opponents to the chiropractor's office.

The Bodyslam

When you think of wrestling (WWF wrestling, anyway) this is what you think of–Bodyslams that send the opponent flat on his back on the mat. This is as devastating as a Bearhug, if not more so (depending on the wrestler) but looks a whole lot cooler.

The Crucifix



For all the athleticism this move seemingly requires, it sure doesn't cause much in the way of damage. With this move, you wrap around your opponent, sending him backwards to the floor, thereby dishing out some hurt for a few seconds. It looks cool, but is better left for those merely trying to impress, rather than win.

Fireman's Carry

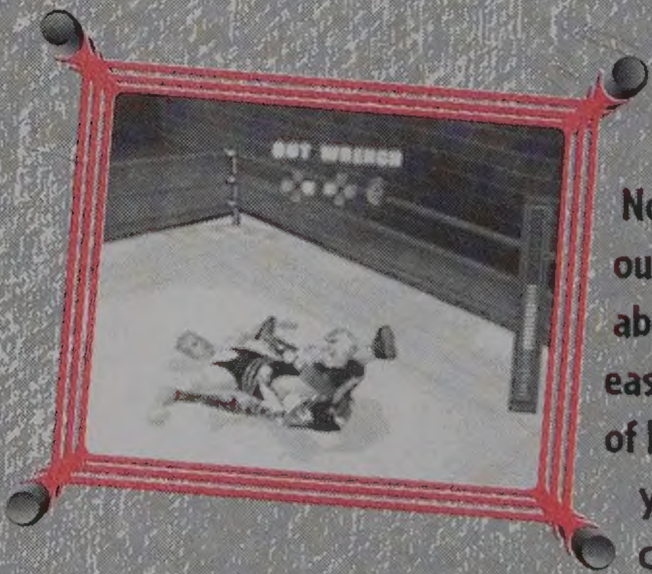
Make no mistake, you aren't trying to carry anyone to safety, but merely trying to inflict as much bodily harm in as short a time as possible. Although this isn't what you would call a damage maker, it's usually relatively easy to quickly execute, making it ideal in most Ready situations.

The Hiptoss

The Hiptoss is another quick and painful move that will send the opponent to the mat. Like the Fireman's Carry, this move looks more harmful than it really is, but it too is relatively easy to pull off and stuns your opponent enough to execute a deadlier move.

DDT

There's nothin' like poundin' your opponent's head into the mat to send chills up both your spines. Use the DDT as a follow-up to a Quick Kick or Punch for maximum impact.



Gut Wrench

Now we're getting into some serious pain when you're talking about a Gut Wrench. It's usually easy to execute and carries a world of hurt as well, so use it whenever your opponent has paused to catch his breath.

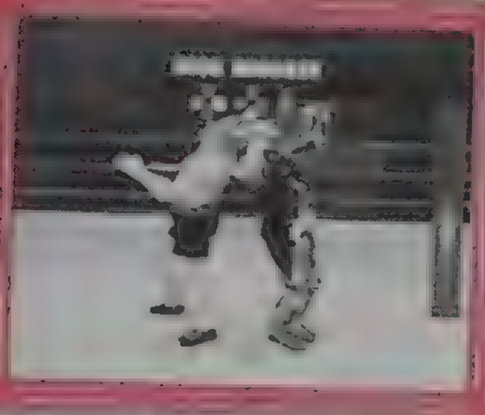
The Japanese Arm Drag

This is another cool-looking move that looks better than it actually is. The Japanese Arm Drag usually only causes 2 or 3 points of damage, so you might as well opt for the Gut Wrench or even the DDT before resorting to this move.

'Kneebreaker

Bringing your opponent to his knees is just what you were hoping for, and this little number does just the trick. Although it looks like your opponent has you around the neck, don't worry–he's the one holding on for dear life!

'Neckbreaker



In case the Kneebreaker just isn't punishment enough, there's the Neckbreaker, which helps put the kinks back in your opponent's neck where they belong. This move almost always causes more damage than the Kneebreaker, so don't be afraid to use it when the opportunity presents itself.

'Samoan Drop

This devastating move is found in almost every wrestler's inventory of killer moves. When executing the Samoan Drop, you pick up the opponent like in the Fireman's Carry, but you stand up all the way and then fall backwards, using your foe to cushion your blow. Although it's tough to execute, those with nimble fingers will have no problem if they're quick, especially if they've managed to temporarily rattle their opponent to set up for it.

'Single Arm DDT

How about sending your opponent straight to the mat face first with no way to cushion his own blow? If that's your idea of a good time, then you'll love this baby because that's exactly what this move does. The Single Arm DDT causes just as much damage as the Samoan Drop.

'Side Belly Belly Suplex

This little move is sure to inflict plenty o' damage no matter which wrestler executes it. By picking up your opponent and going belly to belly with him before slamming him to the mat, you're sure to inflict at least 6 points of damage before he even knows what hit him. Use this move as often as possible, especially when you've just stunned him with a Quick Kick.

'The Spinebuster

The Spinebuster not only looks cool, but it's accompanied by the loud sound of bones snapping. This major damage maker is just what the doctor didn't order. You pick up your opponent, and then drive him butt first into the mat, theoretically collapsing his spine at the same time.

'Power Bomb

Speaking of serious damage, moves don't get much more painful than the Power Bomb, which has been known to register a 9 on the hurtin' scale. With this move, you lift up your opponent nearly over your head, and drive his back straight into the mat. The Power Bomb is perfect whenever you find yourself in a Tieup, and it will make your opponent think twice before fighting you again.

Double Underhook Suplex

This baby, in most cases, causes at least an 8 on the damage meter, and boy does it show! You reach over the top of your opponent, grab his arms, and then flip him end over end straight into the mat. This is another excellent Tieup maneuver that's sure to be a crowd pleaser.

Top Rope Superplex

This is arguably the coolest move in the game. Having stunned your opponent into the turnbuckle, you then push him up on top, grab him, and flip him over onto his back. Now this is what you call fun!

Victory Roll

With your opponent dazed and confused, get behind him and perform the Victory Roll. This causes you to jump on your opponent's shoulders, taking him face-first into the mat. Although it doesn't inflict much damage, it sure is something to show the kiddies.

Reverse DDT

While a normal DDT is damaging enough, a Reverse DDT is downright deadly. With this move, you get behind your dazed opponent, grab him around the neck, and slam the back of his head to the ground. This move causes a heckuva lot more damage than a Victory Roll.

Pump Handle Slam

The Pump Handle Slam is another behind-the-opponent move that inflicts just as much damage as the Reverse DDT. It's a variation of the pick-up-your-foe-and-slam-him-to-the-ground, which is indeed what wrestling is all about.

'Monkey Flip

With your opponent up against the turnbuckle, the Monkey Flip causes you to roll him over the top of you and onto the ground, flat on his back. Believe it or not, this move causes plenty o' damage (at least 5) and is a useful attack when in the corner.

'Cobra Clutch

As the name implies, this baby is a hold and quite the hold it is! It doles out a bit of damage and usually is fairly easy to execute, plus it takes a while to finish, giving you a bit of extra time to recuperate.

'Texas Cloverleaf

This favorite of the Texas natives is an excellent hold because it inflicts hurt on your enemy while giving you time to recover. Whenever your opponent is on the ground, don't be afraid to twist things to your advantage.

'Choke Slam

Not many moves cause more damage than the Choke Slam (9 points). If you manage to get your opponent by the neck in a Tieup, this move will send him to the ground fast!

The Modes of Play

There's more to WWF War Zone than a simple Challenge Mode. We have training, weapons, and we even have a steel cage, all of which come with their quirks and quandaries. If you want a few pointers, look no further than the next few pages to learn more.

Training Mode

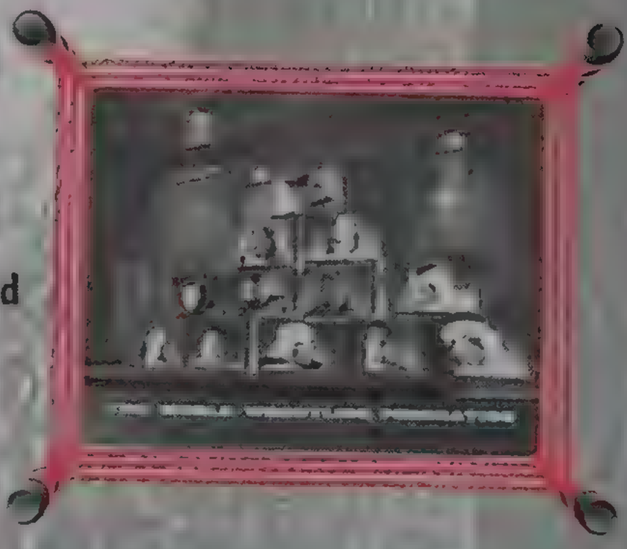
"Training?" you say, "I don't need no steenkin' training!" And then you went toe-to-toe with the likes of the British Bulldog, who easily mopped the mat with your confused face. If you know what's good for you, you'll train long and hard before making your WWF debut. After all, you don't want to be just another speed bump on a wrestler's way to the IC Championship belt, now do you? You want to be a contender, and the only way you're going to do that is by training, mastering the moves for each wrestler, and practice, practice, practice!

Some words of advice: Don't think that every key combination is the same for each wrestler. Although a lot of moves are repeated from fighter to fighter, the moves for a Belly Belly Suplex for one wrestler may be a Samoan Drop for another. Pay attention to what you're doing, and you'll be in trouble fast!

Also, don't forget about the Free For All Mode, which allows you to use all the moves you've mastered and practiced in combination. In this mode, you can see exactly what you're doing and how you just pulled off the stunning Atomic Drop that waylaid your enemy.

You'll also want to pay special attention to how to perform special holds once you've managed to stun your opponent with all these new moves. There's no sense letting your opponent lie on the mat recuperating while you twiddle your thumbs waiting. When his meter's blue, it's time to dish out some serious pain!

The Challenge



The Challenge is the essence of WWF War Zone. This is where you take your chosen superstar and climb, beat, and pummel your way to the king of the ring–the Intercontinental Champion, belt and all! As a rookie, you'll start out at the bottom and work your way up with each victory. Also, other computerized opponents will shuffle around in their rankings as well, so things never stay the same. This is what all that training has been for, but no one ever went into battle without getting a few pointers first. So take heed of the fast and furious tips that follow and use them on those who challenge you.

Challenge Tips

- Don't stand around waiting for something to happen unless you have the weakest of wrestlers. You need to be the aggressor, so get in there and mix it up.
- Avoid getting thrown out of the ring at all costs. While it may be fun to scuffle on the apron, it puts you at serious risk for losing the match by being out of the ring. If you find yourself in that situation, get back in the ring fast.
- While some moves definitely look cooler than others, you should stick with combinations that dole out at least 5 points of damage or more. The only exceptions to this rule are the Punch and Quick Kick, which help throw your opponent temporarily off balance.
- Master the Holds. It doesn't make a whole lot of sense to leave your opponent stunned on the mat while you wait for him to recover. If you can get him in a killer hold, then you seriously increase the odds of defeating him.

- Along those same lines, you also need to know the moves that can really cause the hurtin' when your foe is stunned on the ground. Learn such moves as the Kamikaze Headbutt to give you even more ammunition to take down an opponent.
- Don't attempt to pin your opponent unless you've been dishing out quite a beating for a while. If you try to, you'll just waste precious time that you could be using to inflict even more damage with Holds or drop moves. Better yet, climb up the turnbuckle and really pound on him.
- Speaking of turnbuckles, do your best to whip your opponent into one. While he's stunned in the corner, run over and get in a few quick blows.
- Also, you can use the ropes to your advantage by whipping your opponent into them, and then performing a clothesline on his way back.
- If you find that you may be somewhat out-matched by a bigger opponent (especially Faarooq), try to stay in the center of the ring. This tactic prevents your opponent from throwing you out of the ring, which is a favorite move.
- Master the "Secret Moves" because they almost always offer the most pain for your gain.
- Play to a wrestler's strengths. That's where knowing things such as his height and ratings is so critical (refer to Chapter 3). If your character has no toughness but a lot of speed, you'll have to dance quite a bit to keep him from getting hit. Plus, you'll have to keep moving to get behind your opponent to carry out your own special moves.

Tag Team

Tag Team is monster WWF pandemonium at its finest, and you no doubt want to pair your favorite fighters to see if they have what it takes to beat on any up-and-comers. Essentially, you'll be fighting mano-a-mano as each player takes his turn in spreading the misery. However, this being the WWF, things aren't exactly as orderly as one would like, and so you must be prepared for anything.

Tag Team Tips

- Concentrate on the moves you mastered for your chosen wrestlers. Everything is still the same here, except that you're playing with two, and not one, fighter.
- The wrestlers in the WWF aren't the fairest of fighters, and when an opportunity arises to help out their fellow man, they'll grab it by the throat won't let it pass them by. You need to avoid getting too close to your opponent's partner outside the ring. He'll probably have no qualms about reaching in and pounding you if you get within arm's reach.
- The toughest part about Tag Team is ensuring that you're controlling the correct player. Get real familiar with the "toggle between opponents" button, because it will help you out of a sticky situation fast.
- If you find yourself taking quite a beating, you should "tag up" or at least call for the other player. While you're at it with both of you in the ring, why not get in a few cheap shots?
- The same concepts about staying in the ring in Challenge Mode apply here. If one of your characters gets on the apron, controlling the match becomes much tougher. Stay in the ring at all costs; although having the chance to pound a chair over your opponent's head sounds like fun, it isn't worth losing the match for.

Cage Mode

Time to put the animals of the WWF in the cage where they belong. In the cage, you can run but you can't hide. There's no leaving the ring for a quick breather, and you can't leave until you've thoroughly beat the stuffin' out of the enemy. Again, many of the moves you mastered in Training and Challenge Mode apply here, but with the Cage some things do indeed change.

Cage Mode Tips

- The Whip move can be your best friend, because instead of merely throwing your opponent into the ropes, you're driving his ugly mug into cold, hard steel.
- Keep in mind that your opponent is looking to drive you into the steel bars that make up the cage as well, so stay in the center of the ring as much as possible.
- Don't attempt to climb out of the cage until you're sure your opponent is all but finished. Falling off the sides of the cage or getting knocked down while making your climb can be hazardous to your health.
- Although aerial attacks can be fun, you don't want to miss your target. Not only does it cause a world of hurt, you'll end up looking like a moron!
- Look at the cage as a weapon and not as a hindrance. Perform plenty of throws into the cage to cause double the damage, as the cage breaks your foe's fall.

Weapons Mode

No one ever said fighting in the WWF was fair, and to give it that extra bite, you can use weapons to pummel your opponents. Whether it be a 2X4, a chair, or even a TV set, there's plenty of painful props to pound your foes with. However, you should keep the following few pointers in mind.

Weapons Mode Tips

- Use the Tieup button to grab a weapon and the Punch button to use it.
- Although you do have weapons at your disposal, this is a wrestling match. Grabbing and using a weapon takes a long time, so only pick up a weapon if you've stunned your opponent.
- If your opponent grabs a weapon, don't run, just quickly kick or punch him to knock it out of his hands.
- When your opponent is stunned, don't wait for him to get up before you use your weapon. Use it while he's still on the ground, because he won't be able to knock it out of your hands.
- Wondering what that yellow plate thing is or that gray object on the mat? Don't worry about it! Whatever it is, it hurts when it comes in contact with your opponent's noggin', so pick it up and start the beatings.
- Now's not a good time to climb a turnbuckle and jump on your opponent. That just gives him the time he needs to pick up a 2X4 and knock you out of the ring.

Chapter 3

Know Your Wrestler: All the Right Moves

You ain't nothin' in the WWF if you ain't got the moves, baby. You might be able to bench-press a Buick, but if you don't know how to do the simplest of suplexes, the competition's gonna wipe the mat with your sorry hide.

In this chapter you'll get up close and personal with the game's stars, and discover what makes them tick, and what moves lead them to victory. If you want to see your favorite fighter go all the way, you're gonna have to master his moves. And don't go thinkin' that everyone's got the same moves with different names. Both Steve Austin and Mankind have Front Backbreakers in their little bag o' tricks, but the key combinations are completely different from one another.

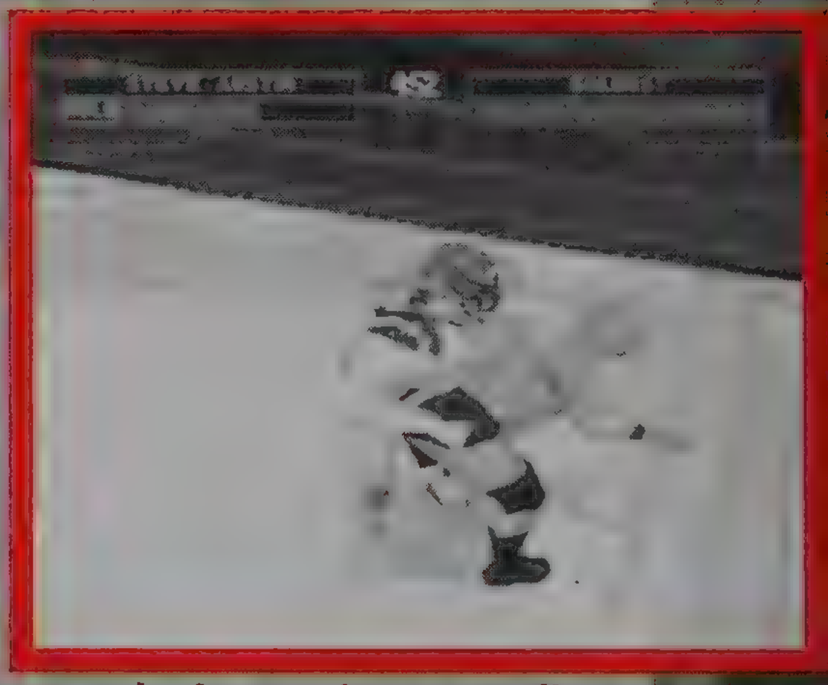
A couple of notes on the move lists: The number in the first column (next to every move) indicates the damage that it inflicts. You'll also notice that sometimes you'll see the same move but with a different key combination. Just like there are several ways to skin a cat, there are several ways to do the same move.

Lastly are the key combinations themselves. Because this is 3D, using expressions like "Toward" and "Away" for directions doesn't make a whole lot of sense. To keep things simple, we're gonna stick with "Left" or "Right," "Up" or "Down," and so on, and so on.

LOOKIN' FOR SECRET MOVES? EACH CHARACTER HAS HIS OWN SET OF SECRET MOVES, WHICH ARE HIGHLIGHTED IN RED. SO, IF YOU WANT TO WIN THE CHAMPIONSHIP BELT, MASTER YOUR FAVORITE CHARACTER'S SECRET MOVES!

So, what're you doin' reading this intro already? Let's get to wrestlin!

"Stone Cold" Steve Austin



"Stone Cold" Steve Austin is probably the one every aspiring wrestling champion picks to go all the way, but a quick look at his stats show that his bark is far worse than his bite. When compared to your typical couch potato he's tough, but matched up against a sturdier foe like The Undertaker, he could drop like a stone. However, Austin's got the crowd on his side, plus a few killer moves that will have the competition thinkin' you really are the six million dollar man.

British Bulldog

Who knew the English had such fight in them? Bulldog's greatest assets are his tremendous strength and toughness, which compensate for his average height. This gives him a fighting chance against the mightiest of foes. Bulldog comes with a couple of pretty unique moves as well, like the Bearhug and the Gorilla Dress Slam, so don't be afraid to use 'em on unsuspecting opponents.

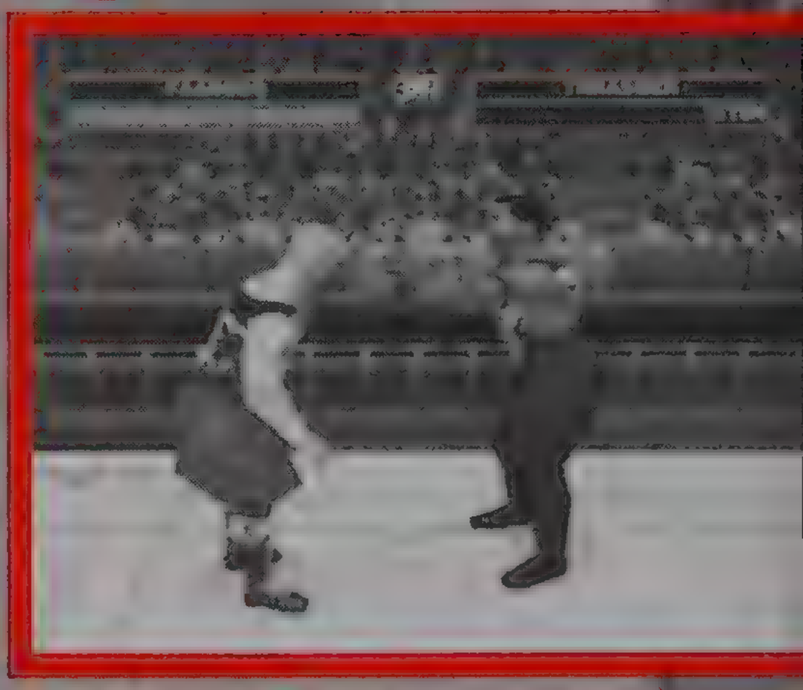
Faarooq



What Faarooq lacks in speed and charisma, he definitely makes up for in strength and toughness. While he is indeed a fan favorite, with such a low charisma rating you can't depend on the crowd to get Faarooq's adrenaline pumping. His Power Bomb and Secret Dominator move will bring nearly any opponent to his knees, as will his Brainbuster and Belly Back Suplex. Be Warned: When fighting against the CPU version of Farooq, he will attempt to throw you out of the ring at the first possible opportunity!

Goldust

With an almost unheard of recovery rating, you don't have to worry about Goldust kissing the mat for too long. Although he's slow compared to some other fighters, once he can grab hold, watch out! His Curtain Call and Piledriver are good as gold in the right hands, turning your fighting foes into dust–gold dust, that is!

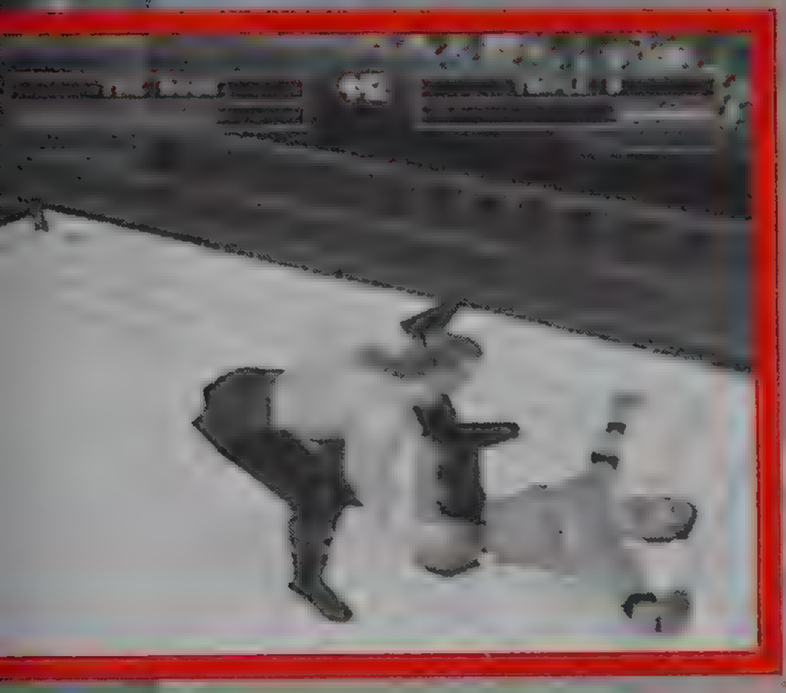
Triple H



Some think the H stands for "Hurt," while others feel it means "Humiliation." Either way, considering Triple H's strength, there will be plenty of both to dish out if you know what you're doing. His Power Bomb and Pedigree moves can also dole out some hopelessness to those foolish enough to meet these moves head on.

Rocky Maivia

It's the rare Rule Breaker who bubbles with personality, and The Rock isn't trying to make any friends (he's a wrestler, not a politician). He's tough and his moves show it, with a Piledriver as deadly as anyone's, not to mention his secret Rock Bottom move. If you're willing to master his secret moves, there's plenty of hurt there as well, with a Belly Back Suplex and his Laying The Smack Down moves.

Mankind

Mankind may look like a freak, but he isn't a pushover. With a near perfect toughness rating and an excellent recovery stat, those steppin' into the ring with this Rule Breaker need to worry about being broken. His finishing move, the Mandible Claw, is as deadly as his Piledriver. Plus, Mankind's Somersault Senton Splash isn't anything to sneeze at either, especially considering his ability to withstand the mightiest of blows.

Bret "Hit Man" Hart

If it weren't for his charisma, Bret would have a considerable time against his fellow WWF opponents. Still, he's got quite the goody bag that he's more than eager to share with his not-so-friendly foes. Bret's Side Back Breaker and Sharp Shooter are sure to put a dent in an opponent's thoughts that this is going to be any easy match. Keep in mind, however, that he's not the strongest ox in the box, so avoid going toe-to-toe when you've met your match.

Owen Hart

Owen's about as fast as they come, and unlike many of the other wrestlers in the game, he actually has four moves that are rated a 9 when it comes to damage. His Double Underhook Suplex, the Sharpshooter, the Shooting Star Press, and the Wheel Kick can cause plenty of damage. But like Bret, Owen isn't the strongest of wrestlers, so keep your guard up!

The Undertaker

The Undertaker's a monster at 6' 10" and his strength and toughness (as well as his slow speed) prove that point. Surprisingly, he has only two 9 point damage moves: the Choke Slam and the Tombstone Piledriver. He does, however, have lots of mid-range moves to round out his arsenal. Still, considering his recovery rating on top of everything else, The Undertaker is sure to send more than a few wrestlers to an early grave.

Ken Shamrock

For the quick (and Shamrock is nothing, if not quick), Ken can provide plenty of hurt with his Shamrock Ankle Lock and his Side Belly Belly Suplex. Although he's a relatively average wrestler, he has quite the assortment of moves to help make up for less than perfect stats. Ken possesses such moves as the Fuji Arm Bar and the Hurricanranna. Relying on his ratings alone can be deceiving, because Ken can go mano-a-mano with the best of 'em!

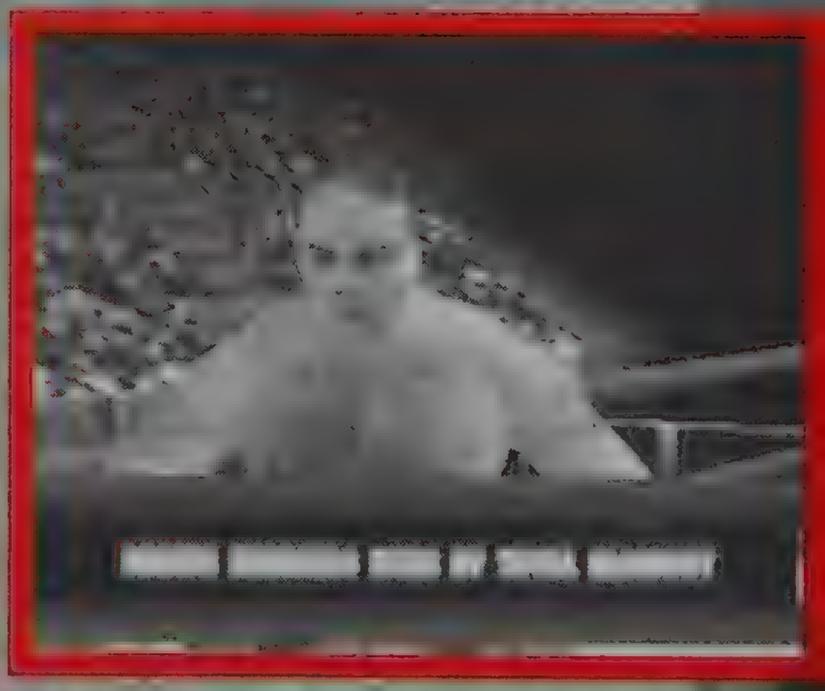
Shawn Michaels



You thought Shamrock was fast? Well, you ain't seen nothing until you've taken a look at Shawn Michaels. Unfortunately, all that speed is needed to keep his opponent's solid blows from sending him to the ER. Although he does have a few killer moves (such as the Sweet Chin Music and the Piledriver), only the most experienced of players can make Michaels the champion he's set on becoming.

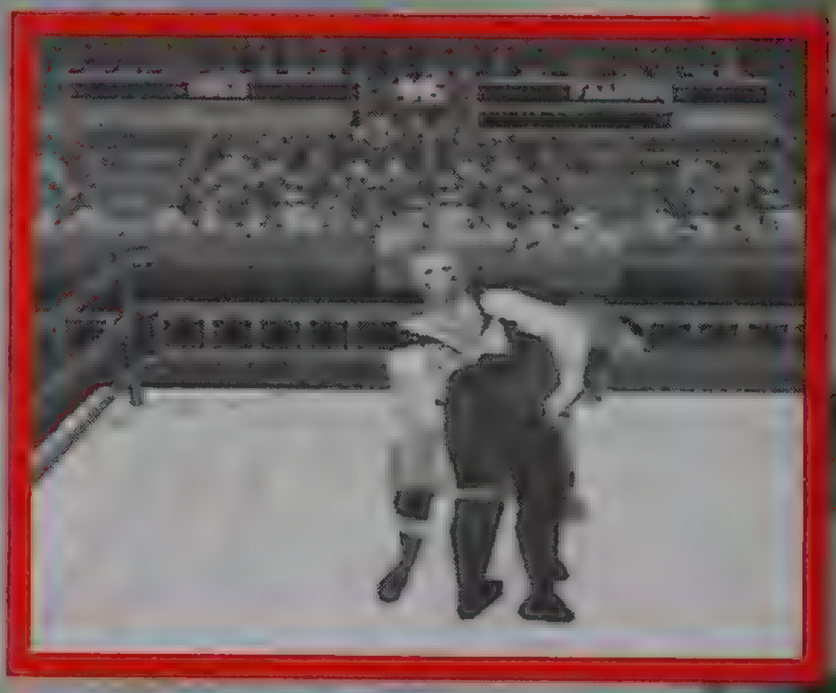
Headbanger-Mosh



The Headbangers are quite the terrible two-some. However, when separated they aren't quite so fearsome, especially Mosh. Although his recovery is good and he can stir up the crowd, it's going to take all the manual dexterity you can muster to master Mosh. He has a solid Power Bomb and opponents will want to steer clear of his Mosh Pit; however, the most experienced foe can easily make mush out of Mosh.

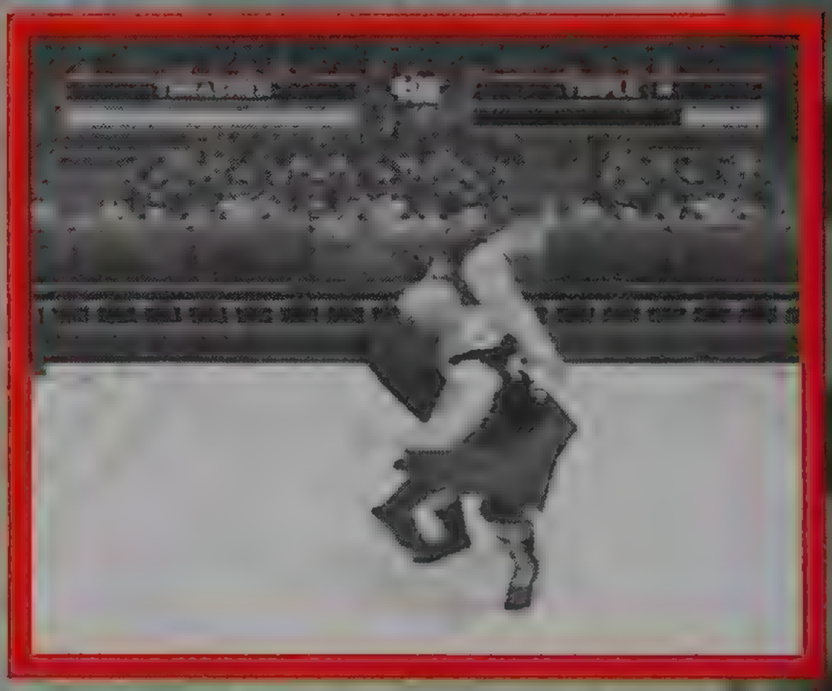
Headbanger–Thrasher



The better half of the Headbanger headache, Thrasher is a bit speedier and has a tad more charisma (Hey, how can you not like someone who really knows how to party?), but he lacks strength and toughness. His Brainbuster and Somersault Leg Drop are forces to be reckoned with, as are his Sidewalk Slam and Belly Back Suplex moves. However, those who can keep him from using his quickness to his advantage will win the match.

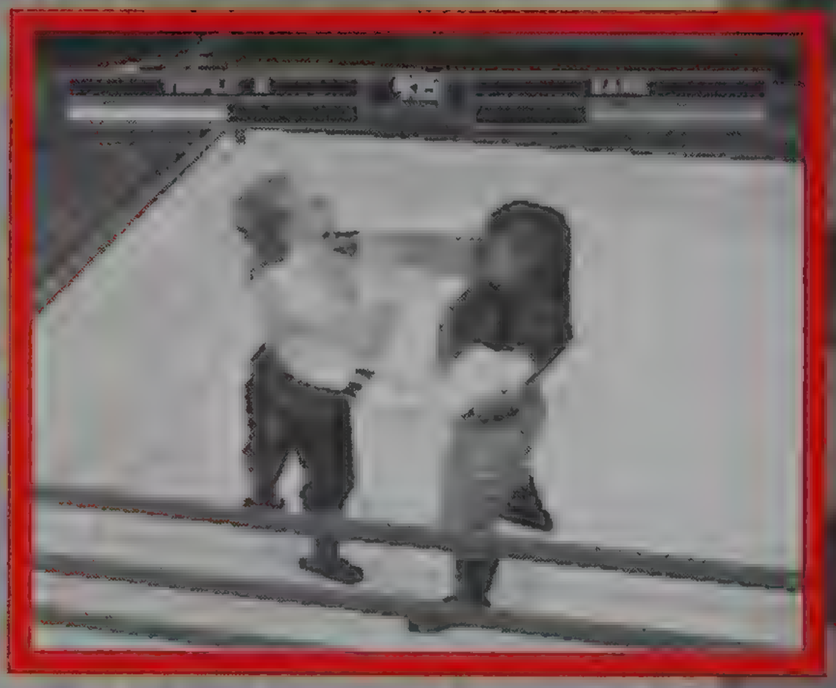
Kane



Although he hides his disfigured face behind a mask, there's no mistaking that Kane is The Undertaker's brother. Not only does he have almost identical stats, whether it's his height or his strength, in WWF War Zone, he also has the same exact move list as his Fan Favorite flesh-and-blood.

Ahmed Johnson

He may only be 6' 2" but don't think that all 300 plus pounds is all fat and flab. Ahmed is strong and tough, plus he knows a thing or two about winning wrestling matches. However, little is known about Ahmed and he prefers to keep it that way. Be warned that he has more than his fair share of killer moves.
